An exciting runaway took place on Railway street on Tuesday morning last. The team was going at a pretty good clip north when someone tried to stop them near the Hepler street railway crossing, which made them turn east. As soon as they struck the track they followed the railroad instead of the street and the heavy wagon, which was loaded with small boxes and parcels, danced a jig along the ties, scattering them right and left, which caused some merriment amongst the onlookers on Railway street but would likely cause the owner a bad half hour.

Masonic Meeting

A special meeting of King Hiram Lodge No. 21, A. F. & A. M., was held on Monday night in the lodge rooms to receive P. J. Macdonald of Calgary, Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Alberta Masons, on his official visit to the Didsbury lodge. Wor. Bro. Lent Ashler Lodge, Calgary, Wor. Bro. Bottler of Kenilworth Lodge, Red Deer, Bro. Kerby of Perfection Lodge No. 9, Calgary, and Bro. Martin of the Crossfield Lodge accompanied the Grand Master. There was a good attendance of members present at the meeting.

Wor. Bro. Macdonald gave a very eloquent and impressive speech on Masonry and what it stands for, facing his remarks by a touching tribute to King Edward VII, who was a Past Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of the world. Those present greatly appreciated Bro. Macdonald's splendid oration.

After the Lodge meeting the brethren retired to the Golden West Hotel where mine host Conrad had prepared a dainty supper with all the good things of the season, the tables being decorated with flowers and the portrait of the King and the Masonic emblem being draped in purple and black. A toast list was dispensed with, and with the exception of a short speech or two the brethren dispersed in quietness in honor of their beloved King and brother.

A lodge of mourning service will be held in the Lodge rooms on Sunday afternoon, May 15th, at 2 p. m., for King Edward VII. All lodges in Alberta will hold these services at the same time.

Cheap Lumber

There is quality in lumber, do not forget that. Poor lumber means a cold crude house, difficult to live in, difficult to rent, and difficult to sell. I carry cheap lumber suitable for some purposes, but the kind you want in your house I make a specialty of. My best grades I store in weather proof sheds. Did you ever consider how much your carpenter's time cost you to work up poor lumber. I am not advertising any cheap sale but I sell cheap always. Quick sales and small profits is my motto. Have you seen that shiplap I am selling at $20.00 per M? Have you seen those boards at $18.00 per M? I carry a complete stock of lumber. Anything you want you will find in my yard. No cash deposits required. You get what you see and buy and both quality and satisfaction is guaranteed.

If you contemplate building, call and see me. I can figure on that plan and tell you what it will cost any time.

Buy Another Good Horse

Mr. Peter Johnston, who is noted in the district for his large stock of good horse flesh, has added another to his already large string in the noted stallion "Earl Seaham" (imp.) [621], which he purchased last week from Geo. Dobson. This horse is without doubt one of the best built and heaviest in the district. As a three year old he won third at Brandon and first at Victoria, B. C., and has always been in the money wherever shown. The sire of "Earl Seaham," "Silver Cup," was sold in Scotland on March 23rd, 1910, for 1,000 guineas at the age of seven years.

"Earl Seaham," was bred by the Seaham Harbours Stud (Ltd.), Seaham Harbour, Sunderland, Eng., and imported by John Graham, Carleton Place, Ont.
His sire was "Silver Cup" [5653] (11184); dam, "Queenland" [9381] (13585); grand dam, "Langton Queen" (11310); great grand dam, "Marie Stewart" [5121] (8326). To his pedigree no one can take exception as his sire has stood at the head of Seaham Harbours stud for many years, leaving many good breeding sires. He has exceptionally good feet and bone. He is without doubt one of the best horses ever imported into Alberta.

Of Special Import to Horsemen

As will be seen in our advertising columns a meeting has been called for Tuesday, May 17th, at 2 p. m. of all interested in any way in the raising of horses in this district. The meeting has been called for the purpose of discussing ways and means of overcoming the present serious loss of colts that is taking place and asking the government to take some action in the matter.

The loss has been a very serious one to the farmers and breeders of the district, over 80 per cent of this year's colts being lost, and it is up to the farmers to take concerted action and to enquire thoroughly into the reason of this great loss in horseflesh which will have a bad effect for some years to come. We hope to see a large attendance at this meeting as this matter touches the welfare of all concerned, and unless united action is taken very little can be accomplished.

Forestry Branch

DEPT. OF THE INTERIOR

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has just issued its English bulletin, entitled "Forest Products of Canada, 1908." This gives the result of the first year's work by the Branch in the collection of statistics regarding its annual production of Canada of lumber, pulpwood, poles and other wood products. The figures have been compiled by Messrs. H. R. McMillan and G. A. Gutchies.

These statistics have been compiled from answers to circulars sent out by the branch to manufacturers in the different wood-working industries. While it is not claimed that they are complete, yet the figures they give seem to be the most comprehensive yet published.

The work was new, both to the manufacturers and to the officials of the Forestry Branch, and mistakes have no doubt occurred in it. The work is to be continued, however, and increasing familiarity with the work, both on the part of the manufacturers and on that of the branch will doubtless bring about greater accuracy and completeness in the returns.

The total value of the production of lumber, lath, shingles, cross-ties, poles and pulpwood during the year was $67,425,044.

The production of saw lumber is shown by the figures to be in the neighborhood of 3,348,176,020 feet, board measure, per annum, valued at $54,338,039. The total production of wood pulp is 953,079 tons, made from 452,777 cords of wood and valued at $2,031,953.

British Columbia easily leads in the production of shingles, producing 724,052,000 of the value of $1,391,306. The total production for the Dominion was 1,499,399,000 shingles, the aggregate value of which was $3,041,099. In the manufacture of laths Ontario takes first place with 265,241,000 to her credit, valued at $612,859. The total number of laths manufactured was 671,562,000, of the value of $1,487,125.

RAILWAY TIES

During the year the railways purchased 13,798,416 cross-ties for which they paid $5,281,085. Of these the steam railways (47 in number and having a total of 25,712 miles of track) bought 13,738,357, paying therefor $5,186,674, and the electric roads (numbering 12 and having 848 miles of track) purchased 240,259 ties costing $92,011. Cedar (including under this term both the eastern and the western cedars) is easily the favorite wood for ties, twice as many ties being of this species as of any other, while hemlock and tamarack in about equal numbers take next place.

No town will become a good business center so long as its business men rely on a few merchants to make the effort to bring trade to town. Too often the men in a few lines of trade are about the only ones that reach out after custom. Other merchants wait until these men induce the people to come to town and content themselves with trade that naturally drifts to their place. A public spirited man should ask himself if he is doing his part to attract people to come to town to trade in helping the entire business community, and no town is a success unless all lines are working to extend the trade as far as possible and trying to bring a larger territory in the circles in which the town is the business center.

DURRER & BRUSSO, Didsbury

The Man From Brodney's

By GEORGE BARR M'CUICHEON

Copyright, 1904, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Just at that moment a tall figure leaped from the shadows and confronted the quivering musician. A heavy hand fell upon his collar, and he was almost jerked from his feet half clogged, half paralyzed with alarm. Not a word was spoken. Chase whirled the presumptuous suitor about until he faced the gates to the garden. Then, with more force than he realized, he applied his boot to the person of the offender—once, twice, thrice!

The princess started, wide-eyed and unbelieving, upon the brief tragedy. She saw her tormentor buried viciously toward the gates and then, with new alarm, saw him pick himself up from the ground, writhing with pain and anger. His sword flashed from its scabbard as, with a scream of rage, he dashed upon the tall intruder. She saw Chase—even in the shadows she knew him to be the American—she saw Chase lightly leap aside, avoiding the thrust for his heart. Then, as if he were playing with a child, he wrestled the weapon from the conductor's hand, snapped the blade in two pieces and threw them off into the bushes.

"Skip!" was his only word. It was a command that his name in Hap-Thorberg ever had heard before.

"You shall pay for this!" screamed the conductor, tugging at his collar.

"Second! Dog! Beast! What do you mean? Murderer! Robber! Assassin!"

"You know what I mean, you little shrimp!" roared Chase. "Skip! Don't hang around here a second longer or I'll—"

And he took a threatening step toward his adversary. The latter turned, fell and ran twenty paces or more in heart-breaking time, then, realising that he was not pursued, stopped and shook his fist at his assailant.

"Come, Geneva," he gasped, but she remained as if rooted to the spot. He waited an instant and then walked rapidly away in the direction of the palace. Huges crossed to see by the shoulder, shook him and exclaimed when it was too late:

"You blooming ass, do you know what you've done?"

"The—miserable cur was annoying the princess," muttered Chase, straightening his cuffs, vaguely realising that he had interfered too hastily.

"Confound it, man, he's the chap she's going to marry!"

"Marry?" gasped Chase.

"The hereditary prince of Brabets—Karl Brabets!"

"Good Lord!"

"You must have known."

"How the dev— Of course I didn't know," groaned Chase. "But, hang it all, man, he was annoying her. She was flouting him for it. She said she despised him. I don't understand!"

"The princess came forward into the light of the path. There was a quaint little wrinkle of mirth about her lips, which trembled nevertheless, but her eyes were full of solicitude.

"I'm sorry, sir," she began nervously. "You have made a serious mistake. But," she added frankly, holding out her hand to him, "you meant to do me good, I think you."

Chase bowed low over her hand, too bewildered to speak. Huges was pulling at his mustache and looking nervously in the direction which the prince had taken.

"He'll be back here with the guard," he muttered.

"He will go to my father," said Geneva, her voice trembling. "He will be very angry. I am sorry, indeed, that you should have witnessed our scene. Of course you could not have known who he was."

"I thought he was a— But in any event, your highness, he was annoying you," supplemented Chase eagerly. "What can I do to set the matter right? I can explain my error to the duke. He'll understand."

"Perhaps—perhaps you'd better go at once," said the princess, rather pathetically. "My father will not overlook the indignity to—my—to his future son-in-law. I am afraid he may take extreme measures."

"Forgive me," muttered the hapless Chase.

"It would not be proper in me to say that I could bless you for what you have done," she said, so naively that he lifted his eyes to hers and let his heart escape heavenward.

"The whole world will call me a bungling, stupid ass for not knowing who he was," said Chase, with a wretched smile.

"If I were you I'd never confess that I did not know who he was," she said. "Let the world think that you did know. It will not laugh then. If you can trust your friend to keep the secret I am sure you can trust me to do the same."

Again Chase was speechless—this time with joy. She would shield him from ridicule!

"And now please not! It grieves me to feel that I may be the unhappy cause of misfortune to you."

"No misfortune can assail me now," murmured he gallantly. Then came the revealing realization that she was to wed the little musician. The thought burst from his lips before he could prevent: "I don't believe you want to marry him. He is the duke's choice. You?"

"And I am the duke's daughter," she said steadily, a touch of hauteur in her voice. "Good night, goodnight. I am not sorry that it has happened."

He turned and left them, walking swiftly among the trees. A moment later her voice came from the shadows, once again, as usual, unbidden.

"Hasten," she called softly. "They are coming. I can see them."

"It's a devil of a mess," sighed Huges when they were far from the walls. "I'm sure it will cost you your job, if nothing else. You'll be relieved before tomorrow night, my word for it. And you'll be lucky if that's all."

"The duke's a terror. I don't for the life of me see how you failed to know who the chap really is."

"An Englishman never sees a joke until it is too late, they say. This time it appears to be the American who is slow-witted. What I don't un-

BRONCHITIS

If Neglected, it may reach the Lungs and may Prove Fatal.

Mr. C. L. Carver of 116 Millard St., Toronto, writes under date of September 13, 1904: "One year ago this spring I contracted a severe cold in the chest, which developed into Bronchitis. I took three bottles of medicine and found no improvement. A friend of mine advised me to try PSYCHINE and in three days I felt like a new man again. I do not let others know what a valuable cure you have in PSYCHINE for it cured me where all other medicines had failed. I am most thankful to be well again, and for the sake of others who may be ill, you may publish this testimonial. Stop bad colds or the results will be serious. It was he who saw to it that the luggage was transferred to the lighter which came out to the steamer when she dropped anchor off the town of Ararat; it was he who counted the pieces and haggled with the boatmen; it was he who carried off the hand luggage when the native dock boys

Lord Deringham, a slow and cumbersome young man, stood by nervously fingering his eyeglasses. For the first time he felt that the clerk was better than a confounded dog after all.

"My dear," he said, waving Saunders into the background, "I think it was an accident. The dog had no business going to sleep!" He paused and inserted his monocle for the purpose of looking up the precise spot where the accident had occurred.

"THE DEAD HAS COME TO LIFE" A "FRUIT-A-TIVE" MIRACLE

MRS. JAMES FENWICK

Enterprise, Ont., October 1st, 1904.

"I suffered tortures for seven long years from a Water Tumor. I was forced to take morphia constantly to relieve the awful pains, and I wanted to die to get relief. The doctors gave me up as my friends clearly expected my death. Then I was induced to take 'Fruit-a-tive' and this wonderful fruit medicine has completely cured me. When I appeared on the street again my friends exclaimed 'The dead has come to life.' The cure was a positive miracle."

The Scented Court.

The rage for perfumes reached its height during the reign of Louis XV. Throughout the continent his court was known as the "scented court" it was then the custom when giving a large entertainment for the hostess to inform her guests what particular odor she would use for perfuming her toilet, and each guest would use that odor in making her toilet. At court a different perfume was used for each day of the week. Much more attention was paid to the use of the perfume than to soap and water, and cleanliness was not numbered among the virtues of that age.

A Broad-Minded Cleric.

Archdeacon Sinclair, who has been making some striking remarks in justification of the drink trade, is one of the most broad-minded and popular clerics. He is also one of the tallest men in the church, standing well over 6 feet and broad in proportion. And he carries himself in a way which made a London policeman remark, when he first came to live at St. Paul's, "He ought to be one of us." The archdeacon is a fine athlete. Once he cycled from London to Thurso, a distance of 730 miles.

A Noble Saleswoman.

There are quite a number of titled ladies connected with trade in various ways in England, but Lady Alcock, wife of Sir Robert Alcock, is probably the only one employed as a saleswoman.

It appears that owing to recent reverses the baronet is extremely hard up and when a new department store was opened in London, Lady Alcock was one of the 10,000 who applied for a situation. It was decided to give her a trial in the costume department, where she has proved a decided success.

Ekimko Wrestling.

Next to gambling the Eskimo men like to wrestle. The usual way of doing this is a test rather of strength than skill. The wrestlers sit down on the floor or in any convenient place side by side and facing in opposite directions, say with right elbows touching. Then they back away, each striving to straighten out the other's arm.

derstand is why he was leading that confounded band."

"My word, Chase, everybody in Europe, except you, knows that Brabets is a crank about music—composes, directs and all that. He's a confounded little bouncer just the same. He's mad about music and women and doesn't care a hang about wine—the worst kind, don't you know. I say it's a shame she has to marry him. But that's the way of it with royalty, old chap. You Americans don't understand it. They have to marry one another whether they like it or not. But, I say, you'd better come over and stop with me tonight. It will be better if they don't find you just yet."

Three days later a man came down to relieve Chase of his office. He was unceremoniously supplanted in the duchy of Hap-Thorberg.

It was the successful pleading of the Princess Geneva that kept him from serving a period in durance vile.

CHAPTER V.

THE ENGLISH INVADE.

THE granddaughter of Jack Wykehouse, attended by two maids, her husband and his valet, a clerk from the chambers of Bosworth, Novices & Grapevine, a red cocker, seventeen trunks and a cartload of late novels, which she had been too busy to read at home, was the first of the bewildered legions to set foot upon the island of Japat.

She was very pretty, very smart and delightfully arrogant after a manner of her own.

Mr. Saunders was the polite but excessively middle class clerk who went refused to engage in the work; it was he who unfortunately dropped a salt case upon the hallowed tail of the red cocker, an accident which ever afterward gave him a tenacity of grip that no man could understand.

If Lady Deringham expected a royal welcome from the inhabitants of Japat she was soon to discover her error. Not only was the pictured scene of welcome missing on the afternoon of her arrival, but an overpowering air of antipathy smote her in the face as she stepped from the lighter, conquest in her smile of reconciliation.

She glanced from right to left down the lines of swarthy islanders and saw nothing in their faces but surly, bitter unfriendliness. They stood stolidly, stony at a distance, white-robed lines of resentment personified.

Not a hand was lifted in assistance to the bewildered visitors; not a word, not a smile of encouragement escaped the lips of the silent throng.

"Is there no British agent here?" she demanded imperatively, perhaps a little more shrilly than usual.

No one dared answer. Glances of indifference, even scorn, passed among the silent lookers-on, but that was all.

"Does no one here understand the English language?" she demanded. "I don't mean you, Mr. Saunders," she added sharply as the little clerk set the salt case down abruptly and stepped forward, again fumbling his much fumbled straw hat. This was the moment when the red cocker's tail came to grief. The dog arose with an astonished yelp and fled to his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress.

He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress.

He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress.

He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress.

He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress.

He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress. He had never been so out of his mind as to step upon the tail of his mistress.

THE KING DIES PEACEFULLY

Intelligence that the End Had Come Was Not a Surprise, Death Being Expected at Any Hour—Capital Receives News Without Excitement, but Sadly—Prince of Wales Succeeds to the Crown.

London.—King Edward VII., who returned to England from a vacation a few days ago in the best of health, died at 11.45 p.m. on May 6, in the presence of his family, after an illness of less than a week, which was serious hardly more than three days.

The Prince of Wales succeeded to the crown, immediately, according to the laws of the kingdom, without official ceremony. His first official act was to despatch to the Lord Mayor the announcement of his father's death, in pursuance of custom.

The physicians soon afterwards issued their official bulletin. Pneumonia, following bronchitis, is believed to have been the cause of death, but the doctors thus far have refused to make a statement. Some of the King's friends are convinced that worry over the critical political situation, which confronted him, with sleepless nights, aggravated, if it did not cause, the fatal illness. Besides the nearest relatives in England, the Duke of Fife and the Archbishop of Canterbury were in the death chamber.

The intelligence that the end of King Edward's reign had come was not a surprise at the last. The people had been expecting it at any hour after the issue of the bulletin, which was posted at Buckingham Palace shortly before his death, and was flashed throughout the kingdom.

The capital received it without excitement, but sadly, for the King with his own people was unquestionably one of the most popular rulers in the world. They regarded him as one of the strongest forces making for the stability of the peace of the empire.

Within a few minutes after the death of the King the home office was telegraphing the intelligence to the heads of other governments and the British diplomats and colonial officials throughout the world.

One of the last utterances attributed to King Edward was: "Well, it's all over, but I think I have done my duty." He seemed then to have reached to a full realization that his end was fast approaching.

The Queen and others of the royal family and four doctors were constantly in the sick room throughout the day. Several hours before his death, the King was in a comatose condition, but he rallied slightly between nine and ten o'clock, and then appeared to have recovered his senses. Then he lapsed into unconsciousness, which ended in his passing.

The body lies in the King's chamber in the northwest wing of Buckingham Palace, which is brilliantly lighted, while the rest of the great gloomy building, with the exception of Lord Knollys' office, is entirely darkened. It was nearly half an hour after the death of the King that the public should maintain the lords.

Remarkable Conclusions at a Public Banquet By Donald McMaster,

London.—Mr. Donald Armour, Canadian Jurist and a distinguished surgeon's son, presided at the Canadian club annual dinner recently. In the course of his speech he said that Canadians were a nation with an Empire realizing the inalienability of nationhood's privileges and burdens. They had received power to arrange their own affairs yet they had determined to give preference to the Motherland. If they claimed control of their own naval and military forces they were equally determined that these were ever available for the Empire's defence.

Canadians, he went on, more than ever believe that the Dominion's prosperity depends upon her permanent connection with the motherland.

Donald McMaster, M.P., warned the colonies that if the anti-bonds proposals were carried by the commonsense, though it was highly improbable, that then they would abolish constitutions which are regarded as the Dominion's palladium of liberties. The maintenance of British connection should not, he declared, depend on a single chamber's will and temporary whims. Mr. Hammersley formerly of Vancouver, expressed similar views.

Honors for Robert E. Peary
London.—Two hundred of Great Britain's foremost men recently honored Commander Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, at luncheon at the Royal Society's club, St. James street. Lord Halsbury presided.

When the guest rose to reply to his health, Sir George Dalrymple, chairman of the dinner, said: "A cheer for Mrs. Peary who let him go."

Among some of the distinguished men in attendance were Lord Strathcona, Earl Roberts, Harry Dewar, the explorer, Sir John Lubbock, Sir A. Conan Doyle, Capt. Scott, leader of next Antarctic expedition, Admiral Sir Lewis Beaumont, Major-General Darwin, president of the Royal Geographical society.

Insurrection Expected
Tokio.—The war department has ordered the army divisions stationed in western Japan to be in constant readiness to proceed to Korea in the event of a general insurrection. It is believed that this step forebodes important developments in the near future.

King breathed his last, when Lord Knollys walked into the office and said to the waiting reporters: "Gentlemen, his Majesty is dead."

The people outside the palace only learned the news when beaters appeared with papers. In the meantime, the Prince and Princess of Wales had taken leave of the other members of the royal family at the main entrance soon after midnight. They drove direct to Marlborough House. Princess Victoria, who is her mother's constant companion, remained with the Queen. The others of the family followed the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Two hundred ships of all classes will be included, and about fifteen submarines are to accompany the Dreadnoughts. This will be the first time in naval history that the little craft will be tested by the severe strain of ocean service. The fleet will assemble in the Yellow Sea, where long stops will be made in Japanese ports. Then they will go to San Francisco and British Columbia ports, thence sailing home.

His Majesty, George V., by the grace of God, King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of all the British Dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India, was born at Marlborough House, London, a stone's throw from Buckingham Palace, on June 3, 1865, and was the second son of the late King Edward VII., who, at that period, was Prince of Wales. He began his career as a cadet of the Royal Navy on board the training ship Britannia, when 12 years of age. In 1877 he and his brother, the late Duke of Clarence, then heir-presumptive to the throne, started upon a two years' cruise around the world aboard the Bacchante. Shortly after the Bacchante's return home Prince George, as our new monarch was then designated, was granted a midshipman to the Cola, on the North American station. This was followed by his promotion to the rank of lieutenant in 1885, and to that of commander in 1891. The revival of the old royal title of Duke of York, borne by so many princes distinguished in England's history, in Prince George's favor, and from 1891, consequently, we must begin to speak of him as "the Duke of York." He was the twelfth holder of this title since its creation in the reign of Edward III., about 1327. At the same time his elder brother, the heir-presumptive, was created Duke of Clarence.

The next year, 1892, the kingdom and empire were thrown into mourning by the untimely death of the Duke of Clarence. This sad event shifted the Duke of York into the position of heir-presumptive to the English throne. This was soon followed in 1892 by his marriage to his second cousin, Princess Victoria Mary, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Teck, which was celebrated with all befitting and appropriate pomp and ceremony.

The death of Queen Victoria on January 22, 1901, raised the then Prince of Wales to the throne as Edward VII., and thereby transferred the position of heir-presumptive to the Duke of York. The new reign was signaled at its opening by a tour made by the Duke of York around the colonies and overseas possessions of Britain on board the Ophir, which event will be still in the memory of many of our Canadian readers. King Edward VII. marked the home-coming of the Duke of York from this voyage aboard the Ophir generally as the Prince of Wales, the title borne for the past six hundred years by "the Eldest Son of England."

In 1905 the Prince of Wales left England in company with his consort for an extensive tour through India, which was fraught with the most beneficial results from a political point of view, as it meant introducing the native chiefs and princes of Hindostan to their future overlord sovereign, the future Emperor of India.

In celebration of his safe return from the tour around the world he was entertained by the London corporation at the Guild hall of December 8, 1901, on which occasion he delivered his well known advice to England "to wake up." In the fall of 1905 he went to India, and when he returned there was another celebration. On this occasion he said that the task of governing India would be made easier if we, on our part, infuse into it a wider element of sympathy. His Indian tour was generally regarded as not a success from a political viewpoint. In 1908 he visited Canada to attend the celebration at Quebec and Ottawa.

The prince is less democratic than his father, and does not have such an ardent love for sports. It is predicted, therefore, that after his accession to the throne, the court gaieties which were always a feature during Edward's reign will be less marked.

His six children are Edward Albert, Albert Frederick, Victoria Alexandra, Henry William and John Charles, and one daughter.

London Post Thinks British Farmers Should Unite to Tax Colonial Wheat

London.—The Morning Post objecting in the interests of agriculturists to free importation of colonial wheat, which may ultimately mean the loss of two million pounds to the revenue, says if the farmers' organizations would only concentrate, they would not prove strong enough to get their own way but by asserting their claim, that they be recognized as equitable by self-governing dominions, each of which has adopted similar policy of drawing revenue from British as well as foreign imports.

The Daily Mail, about Laurier's remarks on the choice of a vicerey, says coming from a statesman of French descent and great experience these reflections are flattering to our national pride and any departure from present practice would be the product of The Standard attributes the scene at Ottawa as memorable and moving.

The Daily Standard criticizes Canadian borrowing methods, making the point that the last thing to be desired is continued uninterrupted popularity of Canadian financial issues with British investors, even if at times some concessions have to be given as regards price of issue and method in place of taking advantage of keen competition on the part of financiers, which might arise if a loan were put up for public tender.

The Times says Laurier's insight is equal to his great experience and he never excels in clearness of vision and felicity of phrased messages which he recently outlined the relations between the British government and the dominions of national self-government wherever they were sent to preside. Laurier speaks of his constitutional questions with something of the fervor and imagination of Gladstone.

Canadian's Long Walk
London.—A remarkable walking feat has just been accomplished by Joseph Lebreque, a Canadian who has arrived in Liverpool after a journey of 6,000 miles on foot, undertaken for a wager of £100, a diamond ring, and a pin. The conditions of the task were that he was not to work, let horse or steed, and the journey must be completed by June 1 this year. Seeing that Lebreque will sail for Canada on May 14 the prize is as good as won.

During his wanderings, Lebreque, who is the son of a Canadian doctor, wore no fewer than seventy-three pairs of boots. On an average he has lived on 12 cents a day.

British Fleet to Make Tour of World

Washington.—England will be the next country to assemble a battleship fleet for a trip around the world. The trip will not take place until the autumn of next year. This will make it possible for the 20,000 ton battleship of the Princess Royal type—the largest in the world—to be at the head of the naval procession. The boats will stop at various foreign ports, and the trip will consume two years.

Two hundred ships of all classes will be included, and about fifteen submarines are to accompany the Dreadnoughts. This will be the first time in naval history that the little craft will be tested by the severe strain of ocean service. Why a pledge against cider?

Our first reason is because fermented cider contains alcohol, and alcohol is an intoxicant, a nerve poison and injurious to the nervous system.

Second. Sweet cider creates an appetite for hard cider.

Third. Because reformed drunkards dare not use it.

Fourth. Because in New England and places where great quantities of cider are manufactured, where the cider pitcher takes the place of the water pitcher, there are more drunken women than are found elsewhere in the United States and Canada.

The next regular session of the W. C. T. U. will be held at Mrs. R. Howe's, Thursday afternoon, May 10. All ladies are welcome.

New Train Service

The time table issued by the C. P. R. for the new tri-weekly train service between Calgary and Strathcona which goes into effect on June 6th has been distributed.

The new train going north will leave Calgary on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 2.45, arriving at Didsbury at 2.56. Going south it will leave Strathcona Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 1.02 o'clock, arriving at Didsbury at 6.22 o'clock.

This means that persons wishing to do business in Calgary and wanting to return the same day will leave Didsbury at 6.22 on the days mentioned, returning at 2.56 the next morning. No doubt this will prove a great convenience to a large number of people but it will make a very long day of it.

Erroneous Opinion on Emigration

A New York paper, commenting on the exodus of United States farmers to the Canadian west, consoles itself with the suggestion that no material loss is resulting to the United States. The majority of these farmers, it argues, are of a class which are abandoning poor farms or which makes an indifferent success in agricultural pursuits. The really substantial farmer, the writer declares, is sticking to the United States. He hints that Canada is quite welcome to her new United States settlers.

Happily for Canada, and unhappily for the newspaper's argument, the Washington government does not take that view of the matter. The federal government declares that during the year 1909 the 50,000 United States

Council Meeting

The Council met in special session on Monday night in the Council chamber to receive the report of the Public Works Committee and to consider the estimated expenditure for the year.

Mayor Atkins, Councilors St. Clair, Good, Osmond, Moyer, Liesemer, Sec. Reed and Solicitor Patterson were present.

Before taking up the estimates the Council had a quiet talk about town-people setting out fires in the town limits with the following result:

Good-Moyer—That the parties who have set out prairie fires in east Didsbury be warned of the penalty provided under the Provincial Ordinance, which is a fine of not less than $25 and not to exceed $200. Carried.

The balance of the evening was taken up with going over the report of the Public Works Committee and estimated expenditure on public improvements for the town this year which amounts to the sum of about $280 000.

The Council adjourned a few minutes after eleven.

o'clock. On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Conrad entertained a large number of townspeople at dinner in the hotel which was very much appreciated by those who partook of their hospitality. The house has been newly papered and painted from top to bottom and presents a clean and engaging appearance in its interior. The service is all that could be desired, and the Golden West will fast regain its old popularity with the general people under its new management.

Well Known Actress

Joan Sawyer, a clever, handsome actress, has this to say of Parisian Sage: "To whom it may concern: Have tried most every hair tonic available, and at last Parisian Sage was recommended to me, and as a last recourse, used it to my entire satisfaction. My hair has stopped falling, dandruff stopped, and my hair has grown two inches in the last seven months. It is the best and only sure cure for thin and short hair I know."—Joan Sawyer, 50 East 90th St., New York City.

Parisian Sage is the scientific hair restorer that has created such a sensation since its introduction into America about two years ago. It is such a quick-acting prescription that every agent who sells it will guarantee it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair, splitting hair, and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

It is the most delightful hair dressing in the world, and is highly praised by society women and actresses who have luxuriant and glorious hair. It will turn harsh, lustreless hair into soft, silky and luxuriant hair in a few days. Do not confound Parisian Sage with other preparations of similar name. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package.

H. W. Chambers is agent for Parisian Sage in Didsbury and he sells it for 50 cents a large bottle. Mail orders filled at same price, charges prepaid, by the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.
